

Relocation & Shipping Services

IT Office Relocation

Whether clients have outgrown their current office space or are migrating to a better suited location, Technimove understand relocating to another office is a huge decision for many organisations and one of the most important elements is knowing how to deal with their IT.

Many organisations possess the in-house capabilities to oversee office relocations to a basic level, but this takes staff away from their day to day activities, stretching resource and heightening risk as the project timelines progress. Alternatively, businesses may choose office removal firms which generally aren't specialist in handling and installing IT equipment, again increasing potential risks further.

For decades Technimove have successfully overseen the worlds largest office IT migrations, moving tens of thousands of users around the globe. Like all migrations, a critical element to a successful outcome is planning from the initial engagement through to execution, so we work closely with organisations to understand the business drivers for their projects. Delivering anything from a dedicated project manager to support internal resource, to an experienced project team who will take total ownership, we engage with key stakeholders delivering responsibility from design through to successful execution against a detailed, step by step project plan.

Worldwide Shipping

Our clients include some of the worlds largest organisations and we successfully move tens of thousands of servers to far corners of the globe for them every year.

As part of our commitment to providing leading transformation services, we have built localised teams of experienced experts, who understand local issues and the importance of meeting customs obligations, when shipping equipment to various countries. We are proud to offer our clients the benefits of market-leading infrastructure packaging, utilising specially designed, heat-treated crates for international shipments as standard, ensuring the safe and secure relocation of your technology around the world.

Many countries will require you to complete complex paperwork as part of their customs formalities and these will change from country to country. With an in-house dedicated team of experts who can facilitate this process for you, we allow our clients to focus on their business as usual tasks whilst we manage the customs processes at both ends.

Understanding what is happening during the shipping process can be key to your plans when the equipment reaches its final destination, so we provide live touch-point updates that allow you to track the shipment and progress offering complete piece of mind.

Start your consultation today, call UK: 020 8686 8800 US: 1 800 675 0538